Let's talk about swimsuits. Like most clothing, swimsuits are typically made from a variety of materials. The specific chemicals or toxic materials that may be present can vary depending on the type of swimsuit, its brand, and the manufacturing processes. However, there are some common materials and chemicals that may be found in swimsuits that are known to have potential toxic properties.

Flame Retardants

Some swimsuits, particularly those designed for children, may contain flame retardant chemicals to meet flammability standards. These chemicals, such as polybrominated diphenyl ethers (PBDEs) and chlorinated tris (TDCPP), have been linked to potential health risks, including endocrine disruption, developmental and reproductive toxicity, and cancer.

Heavy Metals

Lead, cadmium, and mercury, is used as part of the dyeing or manufacturing process. These metals can be toxic to humans and the environment, and exposure to them has been associated with various health risks, including neurological and developmental effects.

Polyvinyl chloride (PVC)

Type of plastic commonly used due to its durability + flexibility. However, PVC has been associated with various health and environmental concerns. It may contain toxic additives such as phthalates, which are used to make PVC soft and flexible, and may have harmful effects on human health, including endocrine disruption.

Formaldehyde

Common chemical used in the textile industry as a preservative and anti-wrinkle agent. It has been classified as a known human carcinogen by the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC), and its use in clothing, including swimsuits, has raised concerns about potential exposure through skin contact.

Dyes and Pigments

May contain hazardous chemicals, such as azo dyes, which can release carcinogenic aromatic amines when they come into contact with sweat or saliva. Some dyes and pigments may also be toxic to aquatic life when released into the environment.

Already have a swimsuit you love?

Here are some things you can do to limit your exposure to toxic materials:

- * Wash your swimsuit before wearing to help remove any residual chemicals used in the manufacturing process. Follow care instructions.
- * Limit chlorine + extended periods of sunlight which can cause some swimsuits to degrade + release potentially harmful substances.
- * Rinse with clean water after every use. Avoid leaving in direct sunlight to dry for long periods of time.

material

THE BEST IS ALSO REALLY EXPENSIVE

There are some great swimsuits that are made from 100% organic cotton and are the best option if you're looking for a completely non-toxic option. However, they might cost hundreds of dollars + may not provide the support and coverage you need while swimming. Because of this, the swimsuits in this guide are meant to achieve a balance for your budget, health, and water-activity needs.

SO WHAT'S THE NEXT BEST OPTION?

OEKO-TEX® STANDARD 100 certification means the swimsuit does not contain harmful levels of chemicals such as heavy metals and formaldehyde. This is especially important when recycled materials have been used in the swimwear material. Also, since even swimsuits with this certification might still have chemicals present, make sure to follow all maintenance guidelines to lower your exposure.

All the swimsuits in this guide have this certification.

MANUFACTURING MATTERS

Here are a few of the manufacturing processes for common swimsuit materials. If you have questions about chemicals used in each step, be sure to contact the manufacturer directly.

ECONYL® Recycled Nylon type of regenerated nylon (synthetic) fabric that is made from waste materials such as discarded fishing nets, fabric scraps, and industrial plastic waste. These materials are then cleaned, sorted, and processed to remove impurities. Next, the waste nylon is regenerated into a new nylon yarn through a process called depolymerization, which breaks down the nylon into its basic building blocks.

LYCRA® XTRA LIFE Elastane proprietary brand of stretchy fiber used to extend the product life of a swimsuit and reduce fabric breakdown when exposed to chlorine + sunscreens.

recycled PET (Polyethylene Terephthalate) PET bottles are collected, cleaned, shredded, dried, melted, and spun into fibers to make swimsuits.

Castor beans which are plant-based however a solvent such as hexane was most likely used to separate the oil for polymerization. This is why swimwear made from plants are not considered "less toxic" than recycled materials in this guide.

HOW TO LOWER YOUR toxic exposure to swimsuits

Take the extra time + effort to follow your swimsuit's specific care instructions each time you wear your suit (even if you didn't get wet). Not only will this limit your toxic exposure, but it'll also keep your suit vibrant + elastic for longer after being exposed to salt water or chlorine as well as your natural body oils and sunscreen/tanning lotions.

* Hand rinse after every wear. Fill your sink basin with cool or lukewarm water. Add 1 Tbsp of mild liquid soap (check ingredients - no harsh chemicals, bleach, or fabric softeners) or 1 Tbsp white vinegar. Gently swirl, knead, or press your swimsuit in the water to create suds. Avoid rubbing/twisting. If you have time, let it soak at least 15 min, then rinse with clean water. Without wringing, gently squeeze your swimsuit of excess water, then lay it flat on a clean towel to air dry out of direct sunlight. If you are in a hurry, roll the swimsuit in the towel and put in a partially zipped wet bag.

* Use non-toxic skin products prior to and while you're wearing your swimsuit. This will limit any damage to the fabric + won't affect performance.

* Avoid using the washer/dryer. This can release microplastics and be too harsh for your swimsuits' fabric.

* Avoid wringing/twisting your suit or using the drying machines at swimming pools. These can cause extra strain on your swimsuit's fabric.

* Avoid hanging your suit to dry. The pooled water will weigh it down and cause it to stretch more than it should.

* Avoid drying in direct sunlight. This can cause color fading and weakness in the fibers.

Add an extra layer of vaginal protection with 100% organic cotton panty liners. These are great to add to the inner lining of your swimsuit especially if you're just lounging around a pool or watching the kids run through the sprinkler. However, test the adhesive strength prior to using them in waves or if swimming for exercise. $8.99 for 44 liners

CAMPING

"Camping" looks different for everyone. For me, camping is in the middle of the wilderness with zero access to creature comforts such as indoor plumbing or any sign of electricity to pollute the night sky. For my husband, camping is in a RV or at a campsite with a public restroom. Since this is a vast category with equally vast needs, here are some great resources to find the best products for you + your next camping adventure.

GRILLING

$229

Wondering if this is worth the hefty price? After two years of having our solo stove, our family thinks it is worth every penny! We have a large propane grill, however have opted to use our solo stove every time we grill.

We have the ranger size with the additional grill top attachment. The base is stainless steel + the grill top is cast iron. Our main reason for getting the solo stove was to have a propane-free option that could also be used safely on Trex decking.

Solo Stove also has a cast iron griddle + wok for stir frying.

Need firestarters? We make our own with egg cartons, lint, and a little bit of wax. Keep a mason jar in your laundry room to put lint from your dryer. When you have enough lint, fill each empty egg section with lint and little bit of melted wax. Once cooled, use scissors to cut each section and keep stored for your next fire.

Don't want to make your own? Here's a great option! Whatever you find, check to make sure chemicals weren't used and the material hasn't been treated.

$24.90 for 70 pieces

We've also had this stainless steel grilling set for several years. Works great, cleans easily, and stores well in the off season. $28.69
